Stacked Deck

A Program to Prevent Problem Gambling

By Robert Williams, Ph.D. and Robert Wood, Ph.D.

This evidence-based problem gambling prevention curriculum has shown significant and sustained changes among young people in their attitude toward gambling. In six sessions covered over a two- to three- week time period, Stacked Deck uses math, decision-making, and problem-solving skills to prevent the onset of gambling issues in youth.

7931 / $59.95 Facilitator's guide, 112 pp., and CD-ROM

Approximately 10% – 15% of Canadian youth have experienced gambling-related problems; children of problem gamblers have been shown to be at a higher risk of developing problems with alcohol and drug use, problem gambling, eating disorders, depression, and suicide.

Lifelines

A Suicide Prevention Program

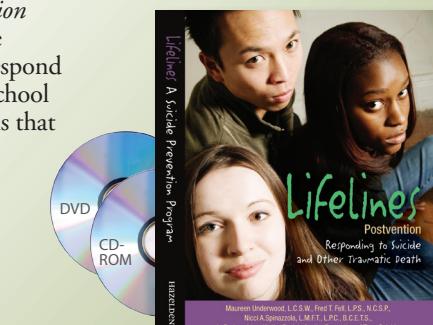

By Maureen Underwood, L.C.S.W.; John Kalafat, Ph.D.; and the Maine Youth Suicide Prevention Program, led by the Maine CDC

This comprehensive, whole-school curriculum educates middle and high school students on the facts about suicide and their role in preventing it from happening. Components include a student curriculum with DVD, faculty and staff training, a parent workshop, and administrative materials. A CD-ROM of reproducible materials is included. The DVDs depict scenarios of student responses to a suicidal peer, as well as an actual response by students who had participated in Lifelines.

In Canada, suicide is the second highest cause of death for youth aged 10–24. Each year, on average, 294 youths die from suicide. Many more attempt suicide. Aboriginal teens and gay and lesbian teens may be at particularly high risk, depending on the community they live in and their own self-esteem.

Drug and Alcohol Prevention

Research shows that alcohol use during early adolescence increases the likelihood of progression to heavy alcohol use and other illicit drugs. The influence of peers, family, school, and the community is critical in promoting or discouraging alcohol use. A successful prevention program engages all of these audiences.
